Pelowski Goes to Egypt As Exchange Student

By PATTI MATSON

If you have a message for Abdal Gamal Nasser, give it to Jim Pelowski. He's leaving for Egypt in a month.

Jim will be sponsored in his goodwill visit by the University of Omaha Alumnae Association in the College and Community Ambassador program. It is part of "The Experiment in International Living" which was established "to create better understanding and mutual respect among peoples of the world through individual contacts."

He will be the first representative from Omaha, but plans are being made to perpetuate the program on Omaha University's campus.

Only Beginning

"This is only the beginning of this program on our campus," stated Jim enthusiastically. "I am hoping through speeches to various organizations in the city on my return — to help raise the financial support needed to send another student abroad next year."

The 20-year-old Pelowski junior will leave July 5 for about a 2 month's stay with an Egyptian family in either Cairo or Alexandria. He chose the Middle East country because "very few people here are informed on the United Arab Republic. I feel that I can possibly work within our goals or better understanding more effectively here."

Big Thrill

"This is definitely the highlight of not only my college career, but my entire life," commented Jim. "The entire idea as like a dream at the beginning, and then suddenly all the pieces began to fall in place."

As to problems that he will face in the strange country, Jim will have an advantage in that he is a member of the family with whom he will stay will be able to speak English.

He is presently taking lessons in the basics of the Arabic language from an Egyptian doctor here in Omaha.

Preparations

"I have also been preparing for the many questions about America which will probably be asked of me. A lot of this training, though, will come to me at they, Vermont, where all the 200 students going abroad will meet for a five-day orientation and briefing."

The Pelowski family is, of course, very proud of Jim, but they are not quite as excited as Jim is. "But then," added Jim "I doubt if anyone is excited as I am!"

Active at OU

Jim has been very active on the University of Omaha campus. A speech major, he has been the recipient of an Ak-Sar-Scholarship for three years. He was recently tapped for Omicron Delta Kappa, senior mens' honorary, of which he is treasurer. He is song chairman of Pi Kappa Alpha, social fraternity, and vice-president of French Club.

This year Jim was elected president of his junior class, and last year he served as vice-president of the sophomore class. He has participated in five University Theater productions, and was last year tapped for Alpha Omega, national dramatics honorary. Throughout his busy years, Jim has managed to work a 25-hour-week, and maintain a 2.8 grade average.

Johnson Elected In Revote Contest

Members of the Junior class went to the polls Wednesday to break the tie for Senior Student Council. Shirley Johnson won this revote contest.

On May 8 students voted for Student Council representatives, Board of Student Publications representatives, and Maie Day Princess. At this time Mary Beth Meyers and Miss Johnson tied for the second spot on Senior Council. Sue Weidenhammer was definitely elected.

This second election was held in the Student Organizations room in the Student Center.

Lambert Honors Course Opened

Professor W. C. B. Lambert, chairman of the committee on honors and degrees with distinction, this week announced the topic of the fall semester's honor's course in American Civilization.

The seminar-type, interdisciplinary class will be organized around the topic "The Institutions of Freedom and American Civilization," he said.

Titled Honors 401, the course is open by invitation only to seniors and second semester juniors with a minimum cumulative grade point average of 3.25.

Because there will be no pre-registration, invitations will be mailed to all students in the University who are eligible. Dr. Lambert said. The invitations "should be in the mail soon after September 1," he said.

Dr. Lambert said:

"As in past years, each student invited to register will be free to choose his own sub-topic and to organize it as he wishes — provided it is executed in a scholarly manner within the limits of the broad topic."

"One is not obliged to function within the terms of his or her own major course of study, however—a vocation or hobby may form the basis for an inquiry."

"So, the graphic arts, artistic expression, and similar areas could be considered."

Junior Cadets Are Preparing To Leave for Summer Camp

Thirteen AFROTC junior cadets are preparing to attend ROTC Summer Training Units this year.

This week they were measured for their uniforms, four 505's (summer tans) and one fatigue and their boots.

In Air Science classes this week the cadets were shown how to properly make a bed. When finished, a quarter dropped from a height of one foot should bounce back at least two inches off the covers.

The summer camp will be held during two times, starting on the 28th of June and the 28th of July and lasting approximately 30 days.

Twelve of the cadets will be in summer training units at Schilling AFB, Kans., and one cadet, Fred Abbott, will be at Fairchild AFB, Wash.

Three cadets will be in the first summer unit, the rest will attend the second.

The summer camps are composed of approximately 30 per cent physical fitness.

The days are scheduled to begin with PT at five in the morning, and after classes and sports, will end at nine at night.

"Humanities"

Dr. Payne, retiring head of the humanities department, will deliver the commencement address: "The Humanities."

In the College of Adult Education, 368 bachelor of general education degrees will be awarded. College of Applied Arts graduates will receive 98 bachelor of science degrees.

Other degrees include 56 bachelor of science degrees in the College of Business Administration, 72 bachelor of arts and two bachelor of fine arts degrees in the College of Liberal Arts. In the College of Teacher Education, 50 bachelor degrees will be awarded.

Special guests for the Commencement weekend activities will be members of OU's class of 1913, the University's first 50-year class.

Sharpe: Grades Mailed by June 7

Final grades will be turned into the Registrar's Office by June 3, according to Virgil V. Sharpe. Grade slips will then be prepared by Data Processing.

The majority of grades will be mailed out to students by June 7. Instructors are not authorized to give students advance information regarding their final grade in any course.

In regard to fall registration, Sharpe said, "We plan to mail schedules to students presently enrolled at Omaha University. However, any student desiring an undergraduate schedule may also come to our offices during the summer."

Seniors Warned 'Not End of Road'

"The greatest danger to a new college graduate is that he feels he has arrived and can rest on his laurels."

That was the warning sounded by Dr. George Harris at the Senior Class Day Friday.

"Remember, this will be a commencement and not the end of the road," said Dr. Harris, class co-sponsor.

President Milo Bail urged the class "to remain flexible . . . have a tremendous amount of motivation . . . continue the renewal of intellectual learning . . . or else we will perish."

$500 Gift

Marilyn Spear, class secretary, presented Dr. Bail with $500 as the senior class gift to OU.

Lt. Col. Harry Dickenson, president of Pen and Sword, said OU has become "almost an entire-bootstrap University."

"The great majority of OU students are bootstrappers," he said, "because they have literally picked themselves up by the bootstraps and are working at outside jobs to get through school."

Award Winners

Five awards were presented at the program:

—Alpha Lambda Delta, Susanne Sipherd.

—American Association of University Women, Mrs. Melba Hendricks Fleck.

—Delta Sigma Pi, Jim Gammon.

—Wal Street Journal Award, Dan Shaffer.

—Paul T. Crossman Memorial, Jim Vance.

The Shack

Reading the class history, Miss Spear told how the class learned why Bootstrappers were "affectionately called curve raisers." She covered the "best of our four years" from the old "Shack" to a police raid at Playland Park during a float-building stint, from OU's championship football team to threatened suspension by the NCAA.

Ed Pechar, vice-president, predicted in the class prophecy that "success will be ours."

Karolyn Kagan First OU Grad With Major in Recreation Leadership

By S. J. Johnson

Ever hear about a major in recreational leadership? There is such a thing! Karolyn Kagan, 22, will be the first woman in portunities — in parks, resorts, hotels, therapy and industry.

Not enough people know about the program to really take advantage of it. Only 75 schools in the U.S. offer this type of a major.

Karolyn, after four years at OU, said the program here is very up to date. "Recreation is teaching people what to do when they don't have anything to do in spare time."

She stated that there is 'definitely a demand for people in this field. There are so many opportunities—in parks, resorts, hotels, therapy and industry.'

Not enough people know about the program to really take advantage of it. Only 75 schools in the U.S. offer this type of a major.

Karolyn has just returned from a 5-day national convention of the American Association of Health, Physical Education and Recreation. She said the trip was "very worth while."

This summer Karolyn will be social director at the New Inn in Okoboji, Iowa, a position she has held for four years. She will plan adult and children's entertainment—games, tours, hikes, water carnivals and a-around "family fun."

Karolyn has no definite fall job planned but has received offers from parks in Miami. She would like to move to Miami for the entire year.

Dancing is a big hobby in the realm of recreation, and Karolyn would like to combine this in professionally with her other work. Other hobbies include creative writing, swimming and roller skating.

A full-time student in the College of Adult Education, Karolyn's activities have included WRA, Physical Education Majors and Minors Club.

Two Students Have Leads In 'Come Blow Your Horn'

by S. J. Johnson

Two OU students have leading roles in the production 'Come Blow Your Horn,' which will open tonight at the Omaha Playhouse. Both are "old-timers" in theater work.

Joyce Hunter plays the part of an ambitious starlet—"dumb," as she put it, "and willing to do anything for success in the theater." Bachelors are fair game!

A sophomore majoring in speech, Joyce has played in OU's productions of "Li'l Abner," "Annie Get Your Gun," and "The Bald Soprano."

She has also acted in Chanticleer's "Auntie Mame" and Junior Theatre Guild's "Green Sleeves."

Dear Editor,

When one enters a college or university, he should be on his last stepping stone to adulthood. If students aren't able to recognize what is real from what is unreal at this stage, then there will be little hope for them.

This University would be in sad shape if most of the students here were in that shape.

Why go on treating the students like babies? Even in high schools, students are pampered intellectually.

Students who run for Student Council stand for nothing specific. About all they say is that they're for OU. So what! This is meaningless. They don't truly represent the student body because they don't know what the students want.

Elections are now reduced to recognizing a name on a ballot. "I don't know these guys, but I know two so I'll vote for the two I know."

Students running for Council should stand for more specific policies which should be debated among candidates and students. Then, when a candidate is elected, he will be elected for a reason—he is for a particular method of operation or policy.

Students should know what the results are. We're not babies; we can take defeat. There should be no secrecy in vote counting in the democratic process.

Candidates should be allowed to campaign by giving out speeches, by passing out literature and by meeting students individually—with all of this starting a week or two before elections so that the candidates have time to explain their views.

One thing that should be tightly controlled is a limit on the total amount of funds used in the campaign of each candidate.

All this is an essential part of education. Learning to be objective here on issues will help us in being objective later.

Physical Education Helps Us Meet Problems of Tomorrow

By Carol Vetter

The world today is faced with the problem of planning for tomorrow's future. Tomorrow's future is held in the hands of overpopulated countries trying desperately to educate the masses as best they can. The United States is among the overpopulated countries of the world.

We would do well to remember that it is the educated who will fail to solve the real problems but will avoid catastrophe through realization of the challenge, while the uneducated will solve many problems only to be overcome by an unforeseen danger from within.

Without an organized and coordinated education, our youngsters will have little opportunity to develop to their fullest capacities. We must provide this education to an ever increasing number. This ever increasing number has added tremendously to the educational challenge of today.

Meet Challenge

But, let us take a look at the way some of our educational leaders have chosen to meet just one of the facets of the new and ever-increasing challenge.

What is happening to the field of physical education?

The crisis is immediate and present, especially at the college level. Already, there is a movement throughout the United States to drop physical education as a requirement in many colleges.

This movement has become a realization in several colleges today.

Why? Why are our educational leaders dropping the requirement of physical education when it would seem so contrary to the needs of our society today?

We all know that the biggest bulk of man's leisure time is going to be spent in some field of recreation.

People Must Know

Why then, are we dropping our emphasis on the education and training of our physical education and recreation leaders? You cannot expect people to take part in an activity without some knowledge or skill upon which to build interest and enthusiasm.

Someone must be qualified to teach the skills and knowledge needed so desperately. And where are these leaders going to get their training if not through college physical education?

No one can really deny that physical education has its place in the college as well as high school and grade school curriculum. But it seems to be the program itself that is under fire now.

Overcrowding

Of what value is a class in physical education with over 110 students crowding and pushing to get their hands on a ball. The only alternative in a class of this size is team sport activities.

And of what carry-over value is an eight-week program on field hockey for the average neighborhood child? Everybody can play badminton in their back yard, but very few back yards are appropriate field hockey fields.

People working in physical education and recreation want their jobs. This cannot be denied. But, they're fighting for more than just a job. They're fighting for what they believe in and for the future of the world.

Change in Mood

Today, the mood of the American people has changed from the mood of a few years ago. There is new stress on value standards, on hard work and more firm adults discipline. There is more stress on so-called basic education and less on the so-called frills of education. Physical education is considered by many to be one of these frills of education.

Through physical education, our youngsters have the opportunity to grow wise as well as smart. Through physical education, youngsters must adjust themselves to an accepted and healthy pattern of response.

In physical education, it's not who you are but what you are that is important. You must take part in physical education. You accomplish goals. You are defeated during contests of great importance. You associate with people. You play according to rules. You accept authority. You experience leadership.

We need physical education! We need physical education! We need physical education!

Trail's End for OU; Log to 21-2

By Detroit Ralph

Omaha University closed its baseball season with two wins over Nebraska Wesleyan Tuesday, to up their record to 21-2. The Indians won by scores of 7 to 1 and 7 to 5 in eight innings.

The two wins were recorded after another loss at the hands of Washburn, this time in the finals of the NAIA area tourney on Saturday in Topeka. The day before, the Indians advanced to the finals by downing Arkansas State 5 to 2.

Ken McEwen, previous winner over Washburn with a no-hitter, took his first defeat of the season at the hands of the Ichabods, 5 to 3. OU and Washburn split a double header in CIC play earlier in the season.

Washburn homers turned the tide. Frank Pickens, who singled a run home in the first, belted a solo homer in the third.

Dan Myers got hold of a two-out, two-strike pitch in the sixth inning with one mate aboard and poled it over the fence.

The Ichabods also collected seven singles off McEwen.

Catcher Don Gridel opened the Indian scoring with a lead-off homer in the third inning.

Washburn pitcher Cliff Cox, beaten only by Kansas this season, held OU to four hits.

A ninth inning rally by Coach Virgil Yelkin's baseballers was snuffed out by disputed calls at first and third bases.

Larry Krehbiel, who had a no-hitter for five innings, got his sixth win in the 5 to 2 victory over Arkansas State.

Don Gruidel and Bill Wachtler led the 10-hit OU attack with two safeties each.

Frank Pecha closed the season with a 5-1 record on a win over Nebraska Wesleyan in the opening game of Tuesday's twin bill. McEwen finished up the game for Pecha, pitching the last 3 and 1/3 innings. Joe Neuberger led the hitters with three hits.

Krehbiel, relieving Bill Drefs in the nightcap, registered his seventh victory against no losses. The Indians needed two runs in the top of the eighth inning to take the 7 to 5 decision. Gary Gilmore added a homer in that game.

Cindy's a come-as-you-are party

She belongs to the bright and lively crowd that goes places and does things—so it's only natural that she takes to the new, the modern and the convenient. For instance, like most busy folks, you'll often see Cindy driving into the U.S. National Drive-In Bank at 20th & Douglas. She appreciates being able to come just as she is—whether she's just finished gardening, on her way to a golf date, or, perhaps, just out for some fresh air. Cindy appreciates the U.S. National's fast service, too. Just last week she stopped by, made a savings deposit, cashed a check and was on her way in less than a minute. Of course, she wouldn't have stopped if she hadn't been sure of the service. She had just minutes to get to the airport, meet some friends and then take off for a long week-end at the lake—but she made it with time to spare. If your days are as busy as Cindy's, why don't you be a come-as-you-are party, too? If you don't have an account, stop in. You'll find U.S. NATIONAL BANK that banking can be a pleasure.
